

Holiday Pet Tips

A season of joy and cheer can be celebrated by both you and your pets by being aware of these holiday hazards:

Decorations

Pets love anything that sparkle and shine, but biting into a glass ornament, light bulb or electrical wire can cause severe injury that can ruin your holidays. Poinsettia, mistletoe, holly, Christmas tree water and needles can be poisonous and/or dangerous if ingested. A burning candle can intrigue and quickly cause substantial harm to your pet, your home and family.

Gift Wrap, Ribbons and Tinsel

More bright colors and things that glitter! You may be tempted to let your bird enjoy some holiday cheer by playing and shredding paper and bows, but the ink could be toxic and ribbons and tinsel are dangerous if ingested or tangled up in. So keep your playful pets away from all those pretty presents.

The Holiday Feast

Special holiday dishes often contain sugar, fats, bones and spices which may cause serious gastrointestinal upset or ingredients which may be toxic to your pets. Prepare a safe Special Holiday Meal for your pet ahead of time so you and your guests are not tempted to share something you shouldn't!

The Holiday Party

Most pets are not party animals. Holiday festivities and strangers can frighten pets. While your guests indulge and celebrate, keep your pet safe in a quiet area away from the festivities. Sneaking some alcohol or chocolate could be deadly to your party animal. Make sure your pets have proper ID on their collars in case they disappear through an open door!
